

Cell Source Retains Strategic Patent Advisor Dr. Michael B. Farber

NEW YORK, NY / ACCESSWIRE / May 20, 2015 / Cell Source, Inc. (OTCQB: CLCS) a biotechnology company focused on developing cell therapy treatments based on immunotherapy and regenerative medicine, announced today that Dr. Michael B. Farber, a Partner with Dittthavong & Steiner P.C. has been retained as Strategic Patent Advisor to the Company. The company's patented "Veto Cell" technology, is licensed exclusively from Yeda Research and Development Co. Ltd., the commercial arm of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel.

Itamar Shimrat, CEO of Cell Source stated, "Dr. Farber's extensive knowledge and deep insight will allow our company to maximize the value of our patent portfolio as we move towards new opportunities, either on our own and/or in collaboration with other important players in our field."

Dr. Farber's career has spanned the past 4 decades representing high-profile clients and cases focusing on licensing, litigation and general counseling for intellectual property matters. Dr. Farber stated that "the Cell Source patent portfolio and patented "Veto Cell" technology holds significant value to not only the company itself but also to those companies that Cell Source might partner and/or joint venture their technologies together."

Dr. Farber started his education at California Institute of Technology where he earned his B.S. in Biology (with Honors) then attended Harvard University where he earned his Ph.D. in Biochemistry & Molecular Biology. He earned his J.D. Magna Cum Laude from Southwestern University School of Law in Los Angeles.
